CANOE / KAYAK

A PAIR OF SCENIC outdoor venues hosted the events of the two canoe/kayak disciplines. The Ocoee River near Cleveland, Tennessee, was the home of the slalom competition, while Lake Lanier near Gainesville, Georgia, hosted the sprint athletes. A total of 485 athletes and 312 boats competed in the two disciplines. Thirty-one countries were represented in the slalom events, and 45 in the sprint events.

SLALOM

The canoe/kayak-slalom competition at the Atlanta Games was held over three days, from 26 to 28 July. A total of 135 athletes (105 men and 30 women) in 120 boats challenged the raging waters of the Ocoee River for a shot at Olympic gold.

VENUE

For the first time in Olympic history, canoe/kayak-slalom athletes maneuvered the white-water rapids of a natural river. Arguably the most beautiful venue at the Centennial Olympic Games, the Ocoee Whitewater Center featured a rugged course along the Ocoee River near Cleveland, Tennessee, 130 mi (209 km) from the Olympic Village in Atlanta.

The course ran through a beautiful rocky river gorge among the Appalachian Mountains in the Cherokee National Forest. It stretched approximately 1,362 ft (415 m), with a gradient of 30 ft (9 m) and a water flow of 1,200 cu ft per second (34 cu m per second). This world-class Olympic course also had carefully designed artificial enhancements to further challenge the white-water paddlers.

The Olympic course was a refreshing return to a time when all white-water races were held on powerful rivers. The foaming and crashing venue truly represented the thundering power of a raging wild river for the competitors, while bleachers positioned on the narrow riverbank provided the capacity crowds of approximately 14,400 spectators with a close-up scenic view of the white-water experience in the wilderness.

"This is without a doubt the most fantastic white-water slalom course in the world," said Albert Woods, International Canoeing Federation Slalom Committee chair. "It combines the best of a natural river with the best of an artificial course."

COMPETITION

In each event, the Olympic athletes navigated through 25 slalom gates, frequently having to pass through the gates while traveling against the churning current. Olympic racers were allowed one official training run and then competed in two timed runs down the course, with the lower score counting as the final score. The time of the run in seconds, plus penalty points, equaled the total score. A 5-point penalty was assessed for each touched gate, and a 50-point penalty was given for each missed gate. Athletes competed in four medal events: men's and women's kayak single, men's canoe single, and men's canoe double.

Kayak Single. A crowd of 14,421, the largest crowd ever to watch a white-water slalom race, was on hand for the final day of the Olympic slalom competition. In the men's kayak single race, the crowd witnessed 1995 World Champion Oliver Fix of Germany seize the gold with a first-place score of 141.22 points. Fix clocked in with an impressive best-run time of 2:16. No. 13 seed Andraz Vehovar of Slovenia won the silver medal, finishing with a score of 141.65, while no. 8 seed Thomas Becker of Germany captured the bronze after posting 142.79.

The race for gold in the women's kayak single slalom competition came down to a tale of two runs. Stepanka Hilgertova of the Czech Republic and Dana Chladek of the United States finished with identical top scores of 169.49 points. In the tiebreaker, however, Hilgertova posted a better second run score, so the Czech Republic paddler garnered the gold. "The course was easy, but the white water was hard," the gold medalist said afterward. Chladek, the bronze medalist at the Barcelona Games in 1992, came into the 1996 Games following a severe shoulder injury that had sidelined her for the entire 1995 season. Her silver-medal comeback made her the only repeat medalist in the women's slalom competition.

Former World Champion Myriam Fox-Jerusalmi of France won the bronze medal by finishing with a score of 171.00. The medal was the first for Fox-Jerusalmi with her husband, Richard Fox, a former world champion, as her coach. After flipping on her first run, current World Champion Lynn Simpson of Great Britain turned in a second run that would have been fast enough for the gold had she not barely missed a gate—resulting in a 50-point penalty.

Canoe Single. Seventeen-year-old Michal Martikan won the first-ever Olympic gold medal for Slovakia in the men's canoe single slalom event. Before the roaring cheers of the full-capacity crowd, Martikan turned in a blazing run to overtake defending gold medalist Lukas Pollert of the Czech Republic. The youngest paddler competing in the slalom competition, Martikan finished in the top spot with a score of 151.03. "He [Martikan] is beautiful on the water," said an impressed Pollert after the winning run.

Pollert, the gold medalist at the Barcelona Games in 1992, won the silver medal with a score of 151.17, and bronze medalist Patrice Estanguet of France was third at 152.84. At 37, David Hearn of the US was the oldest athlete in the competition. Hearn, the defending world champion, finished ninth with a score of 162.51.

Canoe Double. In raging rapids that would swallow average paddlers, the men's canoe double pair of Wilfrid Forgues and Frank Adisson dramatically won France's first slalom gold medal. The stage was set when the pair of French paddlers were about to miss gate 18, which would have eliminated them from medal contention. "We made a big, big mistake," Forgues said. "We had to be on the right side very slow. But we were on the left side very fast. In a millisecond I said, 'We must back-paddle.'" Against the powerful Ocoee rapids that had tormented all 15 of the world's best canoe teams, Forgues and Adisson began the formidable task of back-paddling. As they did, the crowd erupted into cheers, inspiring the 11-year partners to make it through the gate. From there, Forgues and Adisson sliced through the course en route to the gold. The former world champions and 1992 Olympic bronze medalists finished with a golden score of 158.82.

The Czech Republic's Miroslav Simek and Jiri Rohan, silver medalists at the Barcelona Games in 1992, won their second straight silver medal, finishing with a score of 160.16.

Placing third was Germany's bronze-medal team of Andre Ehrenberg and Michael Senft (163.72).

CONCLUSION

Against a backdrop of regal mountains, the Czech Republic, France, and Germany dominated the slalom competition by winning 9 of the 12 medals at the Centennial Olympic Games. The Ocoee River, however, left its mark on most of the competitors. The majority of athletes found it difficult to make a clean run—a trip down the course passing through all 25 gates without hitting the gate poles. In the opening practice runs, all three female medalists from the 1992 Games were among the dozen or more paddlers who capsized; one even got caught in the vortex created by 4 ft (1.2 m) waves at the rapids nicknamed "Humongous."

Navigating the Ocoee River Olympic course, the Czech Republic's Miroslav Simek and Jiri Rohan pass a gate on their silver-medal run in the canoe double slalom event.

SPRINT

Unlike its white-water counterpart, the canoe/kayak-sprint competition is a straight race of speed to the finish line that does not involve passing gates or navigating around obstacles. Consequently, one of the differences between the two disciplines is the length of the boat used in competition. Built for straight-line speed, canoe/kayak-sprint boats are longer and sleeker than canoe/kayak-slalom boats and have V-shaped hulls.

VENUE

The world-class canoe/kayak-sprint competition course was located at scenic Lake Lanier, a beautiful Georgia resort area near the city of Gainesville, 55 mi (88 km) north of Atlanta. The venue's innovative design, which incorporated the natural beauty of its surroundings, placed spectators on the south side of the lake and technical and support facilities on the north side. Permanent facilities included two boathouses and a finish tower with a scoreboard and video boards that enabled the spectators to be involved in the competition, even when the athletes were out of sight on the course. In addition, the facility included a temporary athlete day village. "It's the best venue for sprint in the United States," said Sergio Orsi, president of the International Canoeing Federation (ICF).

Temporary grandstands resting on a floating platform on the surface of the lake provided seating for 17,300. All athlete and event support services were on the opposite bank.

The facility, which also hosted the Olympic rowing competition, became an enduring legacy designed to benefit the region well into the next century. The venue's permanent facilities were given to the city of Gainesville and Hall County for use in holding future national and international competitions.

COMPETITION

In the canoe/kayak-sprint competition, a total of 350 athletes (250 men and 100 women) with 192 boats competed in 12 medal events (three women's and nine men's) between 30 July and 4 August. The women's events were 500 m kayak single, 500 m kayak double, and 500 m kayak fours. The men's events were 500 m canoe single, 1,000 m canoe single, 500 m canoe double, 1,000 m canoe double, 500 m kayak single, 1,000 m kayak single, 500 m kayak double, 1,000 m kayak double, and 1,000 m kayak fours.

500 m Canoe Single. In the final day of competition, the Czech Republic's Martin Doktor established himself as the world's top sprint canoeist when he won his second gold medal of the Centennial Olympic Games. Doktor captured the men's 500 m canoe single race with a time of 1:49.934. "In my town, I will be a hero," said Doktor, whose gold-medal performances in flat-water canoe racing were the first for the Czech Republic in 44 years, when it existed as Czechoslovakia. Slavomir Knazovicky of Slovakia won the silver (1:50.510), and Imre Pulai of Hungary earned the bronze (1:50.758).

1,000 m Canoe Single. Before taking the gold in the 500 m canoe single, Martin Doktor won his first gold medal in the men's 1,000 m canoe single race with a time of 3:54.418. For the second straight Olympic Games, Ivan

Nikolai Juravtschi and Victor Reneischi of the Republic of Moldova won the silver with a close second-place finish of 1:40.456, while Romania's Gheorghe Andriev and Grigore Obreja captured the bronze (1:41.336).

1,000 m Canoe Double. Germany's pair of Andreas Dittmer and Gunar Kirchbach won the men's 1,000 m canoe double final with a time of 3:31.870. Romania's Antonel Borsan and Marcel Glavan won the silver (3:32.294), and Hungary's Csaba Horváth and György Kolonics took the bronze (3:32.514).

Klementjevs of Latvia won the silver (3:54.954), and Hungary's György Zala captured the bronze (3:56.366).

500 m Canoe Double. Hungary added to its medal total when the team of Csaba Horváth and György Kolonics, the reigning world champions, won the gold in the men's 500 m canoe double, finishing first with a time of 1:40.420.

500 m Kayak Single. In the gold-medal race of the men's 500 m kayak single, Italy's Antonio Rossi led from start to finish and won with a time of 1:37.423. Knut Holmann of Norway, the 1992 bronze medalist, won the silver (1:38.339), and Poland's Piotr Markiewicz secured the bronze (1:38.615).

In the women's race, Hungary's Rita Köbán, the 1995 world champion and 1992 silver medalist, finished first with a time of 1:47.655. Canada's Caroline Brunet won the silver at 1:47.891, and Italy's Josefa Idem (1:48.731) defeated Germany's Birgit Fischer (1:49.383), the 1992 gold medalist, for the bronze.

1,000 m Kayak Single. World Champion Knut Holmann of Norway led the final men's 1,000 m kayak single race from start to finish to capture the gold with a time of 3:25.785. Italy's Beniamino Bonomi won the silver at 3:27.073, and the 1992 gold medalist, Australia's Clint Robinson, took the bronze (3:29.713).

500 m Kayak Double. In the men's 500 m kayak double race, Germany's duo of Kay Bluhm and Torsten Gutsche successfully defended its Olympic gold medal, winning with a time of 1:28.697, while silver medalists Daniele Scarpa and Beniamino Bonomi of Italy were a mere .032 behind at 1:28.729. Australia's Daniel Collins and Andrew Trim won the bronze (1:29.409).

In the women's 500 m kayak double final, Sweden's team of Agneta Andersson and Susanne Gunnarsson improved on their silver-medal showing at the Barcelona Games with a gold-medal victory in 1996. Andersson and Gunnarsson clocked in with a time of 1:39.329, while Germany's 1992 gold medalist Ramona Portwich teamed with Birgit Fischer to win the silver at 1:39.689. Australia's team of Katrin Borchert and Anna Wood captured the bronze (1:40.641).

1,000 m Kayak Double. Kay Bluhm and Torsten Gutsche again reached the finals, but they were not as fortunate in the men's 1,000 m kayak double race. Antonio Rossi and Daniele Scarpa of Italy defeated Germany's defending gold medalists with a time of 3:09.190. Bluhm and Gutsche took the silver (3:10.518), and Bulgaria's Andrian Dushev and Milko Kazanov earned the bronze (3:11.206).

500 m Kayak Fours. Germany's Birgit Fischer, Manuela Mucke, Ramona Portwich, and Anett Schuck adjusted to the wind conditions and easily won the gold-medal race of the women's 500 m kayak fours with a time of 1:31.077. "We had to change our race plan due to the wind coming from behind us," Fischer said. "But we trained under a variety of conditions, so that was no big problem." Switzerland (Daniela Baumer, Sabine Eichenberger, Ingrid Haralamow, and Garbiela Müller) won the silver with a time of 1:32.701. Sweden (Agneta Andersson, Ingela Ericsson, Anna Olsson, and Susanne Rosenqvist) repeated as the bronze-medal winner (1:32.917).

1,000 m Kayak Fours. Germany's quartet of Detlef Hofman, Thomas Reineck, Olaf Winter, and Mark Zabel captured the gold in the men's 1,000 m kayak fours with a winning time of 2:51.528. Hungary (Attila Adrovicz, Ferenc Csipes, Gábor Horváth, and András Rajna) repeated as the silver-medal winner in the event (2:53.184), and the Russian Federation (Oleg Goroby, Anatoliy Tishchenko, Georgiy Tsybulnikov, and Sergey Verlin) won the bronze (2:53.996).

CONCLUSION

Overall, Germany led the sprint medal count at the Centennial Olympic Games with four gold and two silver medals. Italy was second with two golds, two silvers, and a bronze. Hungary followed with two gold, a silver, and three bronze medals.

In addition, Germany's Birgit Fischer tied an Olympic mark. The 34 year old's gold- and silver-medal performances in the 1996 Games gave her a lifetime total of eight Olympic medals (five gold and three silver), which tied her with Sweden's Gert Fredriksson as the most decorated sprint paddler in Olympic history.
